TRIESTE RIVAL OF NAPLES IN BEAUTY

City Long Desired by Italians
Nestles in Lovely Bay.

HAS HISTORICAL SETTING.

Almost Every Inch of Coast Now Once Again the Object of War Has Been Marked in Interest in Real Life, Romance and Song For Many Generations.

As seen from the sea Trieste, the capture of which was one of the reasons why Italy entered the war, is wonderfully reminiscent of Naples. From the semicircular bay the city rises in terraces of much harmony, beauty and picturesque composition.

Conspicuous on the left shore, the waters of the bay lapping its foundations, is the Villa Miramar, which recalls one of the many tragic chapters in the history of the Hapsburgs, for it was built by Maximilian, brother of the aged emperor of Austria, the man who became emperor of Mexico, where he was put to death. His widow, the Empress Carlotta, her mind shattered, still survives in an asylum in Belgium. From an architectural and linguistic point of view the city of Trieste is entirely Italian, all streets and shop signs being in that language. It is not until one goes into the outlying districts that signs in other tongues are found, and then they are not German, but Croatian.

Shows Vivid Contrast.

After turning the end of the conspicuous cape of the peninsula of Istria, Pola, Austria's chief naval station, comes into view. Here at once is found a vivid contrast between past and present, for, while the harbor is full of warships, there rises in full view in the center of the town a great Roman amphitheater, which Italy has ordered her aviators and gunners to spare.

It is in Pola that your eye begins to be struck with the violent coloring of the native costumes of Dalmatia, one of the few parts of continental Europe in which these are faithfully adhered to. They are brilliant in the extreme, blues, reds, yellows and green predominating, while in their entirety they have a character which is thoroughly distinctive.

Zara, the luxurious Zadera of the ancient Romans, is the real beginning of Dalmatia and here again there are remains of the architectural glories of the days when Christianity was still in its infancy.

There was also a flourishing Byzantine Zara and a medieval one, most of which remains today, save along the sea front, where modern structures have taken the place of the massive walls that frowned down upon the crusaders as they passed along in their ships fashioned in the famous arsenal of Venice, the same upon which some Austrian bombs fell a few days ago. It is this same historic shipyard, by the way, which forms the setting for Garuso's great aria "Cleio e Mare" in "La Gioconda."

Is Link With Past.

Another of Zara's links with the Venice of a long gone day is found in the sculptured lion of St. Mark, which still watches from over the Porta Maritima and has been watching the Italians say, for the coming of the descendants of those who proudly placed him there.

Within the shelter of the hundreds of islands which dot the coast you sail then to Zebenico, on the shores of such a landlocked harbor that it is naturally defended from attack. Here, too, the winged lion is to be seen above the city's chief portal. Zebenico is likewise a naval station and has already figured in the news.

Spalato, the next port of call, although of no military or strategic importance, is nevertheless one of the most interesting towns of Europe, for almost its entire population dwells within the walls of a palace built in the fourth century by the Emperor Diocletian to serve him as a place of luxurious retirement when he had grown weary of empire. He dwelt in this superb structure only nine years, faithful to his old gods to the end, although over in the Rome which he had left Constantine had been converted to Christianity and that religion had become the official one of the Roman world.

From here southward to Trau is to be found the most smiling and beautiful stretch of the Dalmatian coast, while further along there is seen Ragusa, a walled promontory which reminds you of details of a Maxfield Parrish picture; it seems so much of the imagination and so little of reality. For centuries this place was a well administered republic until wiped out by a stroke of Napoleon's pen.

MADE AN ORPHAN BY LUSITANIA DISASTER

Pretty New York Girl Tells of Experiences on Vessel.

New York.—"If the ship's officers had not assured us there was no danger and that the vessel would not sink I think more lives would have been saved."

This is the opinion of Miss Virginia B. Loney of Huntington, N. Y., a survivor of the Lusitania disaster, who arrived here, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Sedwick.

Miss Loney, who is sixteen, but large for her years, was greatly saddened by the loss of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen D. Loney, who accompanied her on the disastrous trip of the Lusitania.

"Five minutes before the Lusitania sank," she said, "two officers went around the deck and assured us there was no danger. As soon as the torpedo struck my father went below to get life preservers. He procured some, but used none for himself. My father and mother both insisted that I get into one of the lifeboats that was being lowered. I did not want to leave them, but they insisted in a fond way that I go. The boat was upset and I was thrown into the sea, where I drifted for about ten minutes. Then

I was picked up. My father and mother went down with the ship."

Miss Loney took an ear that had fallen from the hands of a sailor who had collapsed and did her share of the rowing until the survivors were taken aboard a trawler.

While the St. Paul was being conveyed through the war zone by two British destroyers, Mrs. Sedwick, her companion, suddenly exclaimed: "See! There is a submarine!"

Miss Loney became greatly agitated, and, turning her gaze toward the sea, said: "No, no! I can't stand it again." The ship's officers said the perilous of a British submarine might have been seen, but that no German craft had come to the surface during the run through the war zone.

GAVE UP MORPHINE SUPPLY.

Woman, Sixty-four, Then Asked to Be Sent Away.

Evansville, Ind.—During the war she was determined to win in a fight against the drug habit, to which she had been addicted many years, Mrs. Maud Lynn, aged sixty-four, walked into the office of Samuel Wurm, township trustee of Pigeon township here, and presented Wurm with a cardboard box containing about $50 worth of morphine.

The woman told the trustee the morphine was all the property she had and that she wished to part with it on condition that she be sent to a sanitarium to be cured of the drug habit. She was sent to a local hospital.

REVOLT IN INDIA WAS HATCHED IN AMERICA.

Kindus Foiled in Plot Say They Had Aid of Germans Here.

The full story of a carefully planned effort to effect a revolution in British India, hatched, it is said, in California, has been revealed in court proceedings under the new defense of India act at Lahore. Eighty-one persons are charged with "conspiracy to overthrow by force the lawful government of India."

The attempt at revolution, according to the witnesses, was launched under German auspices at a meeting of 5,000 or 6,000 East Indians at Sacramento in August, 1914.

"It was thought," declared one witness who was present at this meeting, "that as a great war had broken out in Europe it was a good chance for East Indians to demand their rights and, if necessary, to use force." The witness was one of a party of seventy Indians who sailed from San Francisco on Aug. 29 for Hongkong en route for India.

The Sacramento meeting was one of a number held at various places in America after the failure of the attempt of Gurdit Singh to obtain the entry of 455 Indian laborers into Vancouver, contrary to law, and their return to the east.

Following the arrival at Hong Kong of the party which sailed from San Francisco on Aug. 29, Indians went to various parts of the far east with a view to seditious propaganda.

A general rising in the Punjab was fixed for Feb. 21, but on Feb. 19 suspicion fell on one Kirpal Singh, who had arranged to go and excite the troops at Main Mir. The conspirators were surrounded at a house in Lahore and the plot was frustrated.

MAKE VEILS FOR SOLDIERS.

Women of South Africa Protect Their Men From Mosquitoes.

While the women of Europe have been knitting socks and making anti-gas respirators the women of South Africa have been equally busy making veils for the army of the Cape Colonies.

The chief enemies of the army steadily pushing into German Southwest Africa are the swarms of deadly disease carrying insects—mosquitoes, sandflies, and so on. Veils cover the soldier's head and neck and are tucked into his tunic.

Veil making at afternoon tea parties, though less exciting, has entirely cut out the diamond hunting which used to be the entertainment at Kimberley women's gatherings.

MAY BE WANTED FOR MURDER

Wilson Hayes was tried before Justice King yesterday for being drunk and disorderly on the 5th and given ten days in the county jail. Hayes may find his celebration very costly, for he closely answers the description of Jose Caseltaria, wanted in Los Angeles for the past two years for murder. His Bertillon description and a photograph will be sent to Los Angeles and if he is the man he will be sent back to answer to the murder charge.—Appeal.

AUTO PARTY PLEADED WITH NEVADA ROADS

O. C. Van Meter, wife, two daughters and their chauffeur arrived last night at midnight from Iowa City, Iowa. They are traveling in a Cadillac double six and are on their way to Los Angeles and other coast towns. The machine was eighteen days on the road and, with the exception of a single blowout, not a mishap occurred. Mr. Van Meter pronounced the road from Ely to Tonopah, especially the last ninety-five miles, as one of the best natural thoroughfares he had ever traveled over.

SHARP SHOOTERS OF TYROL ARE UNIQUE

ONE OF MOST EFFICIENT ORGANIZATIONS OF ITS KIND IN EUROPE

(By Associated Press.)

VIENNA, July 9.—The war with Italy has brought out, ready for action, a body of men that are perhaps unique the world over—the Tyrolean sharpshooters. Thousands of these men, ranging from 17 up to old age, the members of the 406 royal and imperial "shooting stands," constitute one of the most efficient organizations of their kind in Europe.

The shooting stands are volunteer organizations elsewhere, but in Austria are controlled by and are a part of the state. When called out the "stands" go as units and are assigned to special duty. The members wear the national Tyrolean costume, with arm bands to identify them.

There is no age limit for the sharpshooters, and for generations it has been a matter of personal pride to keep fit and in good condition. It has been close to a disgrace to be relieved of membership on a physician's recommendation.

A store that advertises must be a store of values—of "bargains"—or the advertising would not pay.
